Synopsis

Meet They Screaming Men. From Finland to Tokyo to France, they scream national anthems. The audiences are exalted, and sometimes shocked and bewildered. Howling and comical can turn into dead serious without warning. Their versions of national anthems do not always make everybody happy. When The Screaming Men perform in Paris, both the museum and the Finnish embassy tries to prevent them.

The Screaming Men are led by the conductor Petri Sirviö, a total dictator, a control freak, a maniac, the only man who can control The Screaming Men, who's lust for conflict can never be quenched. This is a film about power, nationalism, intransigence and firm belief in your own art.
