Synopsis

Hiroto is a former surfing champion from Japan. After the disappearance of Maria, the girl he loved, Hiroto lost his once overwhelming passion to ride waves. He moves to an unfamiliar town, landing a job with a gardening company. He's teamed up with another Japanese man, Ricky, to landscape clients' yards. Soon after he begins this new job, Hiroto saves a high school girl named Linda, from drowning.

While Hiroto still daydreams of Maria, he finds Linda irresistible. As things heat up, Ricky warns Hiroto not to indulge himself. Despite this warning, Hiroto sleeps with Linda, immediately regretting it. Riddled with remorse and blaming himself for Maria's disappearance, Hiroto decides to leave Linda.

Hiroto moves on to another gardening company to get on with his life, when Detective Peterson shows up to question him. Apparently, Linda has been missing for a week. Knowing Hiroto is linked, but without evidence, the police release him.

Soon, Hiroto begins having terrible nightmares, in which his memories of Maria are contradicted and challenged. Was Maria really in love with Hiroto? Is Hiroto involved with Linda's disappearance? Blue Tide unravels the mysteries, as we observe Hiroto's inner and outer world.
