Synopsis

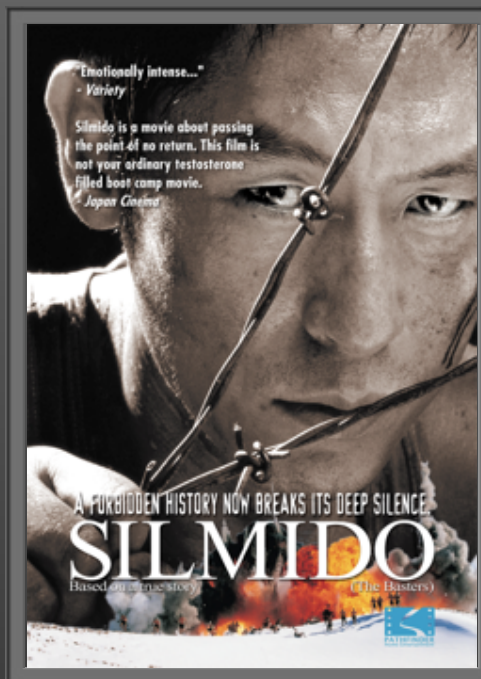

January 1968, 31 members of North Korean Special Unit 124 infiltrated South Korea with the ultimate mission of attacking the Blue House (Presidential Palace in Korea) and assassinating President PARK Chung-hee.

A gritty, realistic portrayal of war and its casualties. In 1968, After stopping a team of North Korean assassins, South Koreans decided to form their own group of assassins, straight from the dregs of society. The mission, to kill Kim Il-Sung, the then North Korean leader. These men endured the hellish training. However, the changes in political climate and the detente between North and South Korea made these men a liability - their government turned them into killers, then abandoned them. A superb drama of individuals caught in the maelstrom of politics and history.

Additional Information

Silmido is a movie about passing the point of no return. This film is not your ordinary testosterone filled boot camp movie.
- Japan Cinema

"Intense, violent... Korea's answer to The Dirty Dozen."
- Super Reviewer

"Emotionally intense..."
-Variety

"The crackerjack direction of Kang Woo-suk keeps the pace lively enough to overlook the on-screen brutality."
