Synopsis

If "Clerks" and "Dangerous Liasons" had a bastard child, it would be "The Snake". Ken (Adam Goldstein) will sleep with anything that moves, as long as that thing is female. Young, old, fat, thin, even bulimic, it doesn't matter.

In fact, Ken joins a bulimic support group with the idea of getting into the pants of Talia (Nina Braddock). This group contains plenty of obstacles who are on to Ken's intentions. A feminist, a lesbian, an advertising executive, a divorcée and a gay rights activist. Each week, Ken is forced to partner with one of these ladies to support their bulimic problem. Can Ken keep up with this charade or is this situation too much even for The Snake.

Even Margaret Cho eventually makes an appearance in this charcoal dark comedy.
